2024 Dead Man Walking Eden Valley Riesling

2024 Vintage

The lead up to the 2024 vintage was atypical for Eden Valley with unusually warm and dry conditions through the Winter and Spring of 2023. Three consecutive preceding years of record-breaking rainfall however, ensured soils, dams and aquifers were well supplied with abundant moisture. While the rains were scarce, a severe hailstorm in late November caused significant damage across the northern reaches of the Barossa; fortunately though, hail damage throughout Eden Valley was sporadic and comparatively minor.

Summer temperatures and rainfall were in line with the long-term average with sporadic rains dissipating entirely with the onset of Autumn. The Barossa Valley would experience its driest autumn on record, receiving only 15% of the long-term average rainfall for the season. The dry ripening season ensured zero disease pressure with cooler conditions in late summer and early autumn and occasional short bursts of warmer weather ensuring maximum flavour development and natural acid retention.

2024 Dead Man Walking Eden Valley Riesling

Dead Man Walking Eden Valley Riesling incorporates fruit from four family growers in Eden Valley – Ben Zander, Michael Mason and Mark Bartholomaeus in Flaxman Valley, and Avon Brae vineyards near Springton. These four vineyards are spread across the Southern ranges of the valley, producing fruit that encapsulates the unique spectrum of aromas, flavours and mouthfeel that makes Eden Valley Riesling so renown.

Eden Valley Rieslings are renown for delicacy and refinement. The 2024 Dead Man Walking Eden Valley Riesling highlights the unique character of Eden Valley in a beautifully composed symphony of aromas and flavours. A sweetly perfumed bouquet of rosewater and apple blossom dance above citrusy notes of fresh lime, and lemon pith. The palate is bright yet richly flavoured with the iconic slate-like minerality synonymous with Eden Valley, providing ballast for the lifted citrus and sweet floral notes that run the length of the palate through to the crisp, lingering finish. A wine for immediate enjoyment and complementary to a range of cuisines.
